ILLUSTRATIVE HOROSCOPES

BY

B. SURYANARAIN RAO, B A, M R A S,

INTRODUCTION

No Science or Art has ever been so misunderstood or more persistently attacked than that which deals with the subtle influences of the planets upon the terrestrial phenomena. So sublime in its concepts that the weak human mind cannot appreciate and comprehend the intrinsic value of its fundamental truths unless it is elevated to a high degree. Astrology has often been confused with fatalism or predestination and the unthinking minds, in their ignorance of the power of spirit, have failed to recognise the fact that the human will is limitless in its potentiality when intelligently directed and properly educated.

Man, by a fore knowledge and a clear understanding of the planetary influences which surround him, can so create an environment, that he may, to a great extent, successfully cope with adverse planetary conditions indicated by his past karma or remove the evil influences of the planets by adopting, at proper times, remedies prescribed in the Vedic texts about which I have comprehensively treated in my book "An Introduction to the Study of Astrology in the Light of Modern Sciences, 7th Edition". It is only through patient and candid study that one can hope, in any appreciable measure, to comprehend the mundane as well as the divine significance of these eternal truths of which the sublime Science of Astrology is the sole interpreter. Thus, astrology instead of being solely a media as a Jugglery in the hands of a charlatan or a gipsy, has a deeper divine significance underlying all its precepts which can be understood in all its glory only by men who bring to bear in their studies, unprejudiced mind unremitting labour and unfailing patience. It is a curious fact in the History of Astrology that not one eminent astrologer has given any illustrative horoscopes excepting Valmiki, who has mentioned only the horoscope of Rama in Ramayana. Vedavyasa in his Mahabharata mentions simply the stars of certain heroic characters and in Bhagavatha the time of the birth of Sri Krishna is given and the constellation Rohini which ruled that Divinity at the time of birth. Gargi, Vasista, Parasara, Narada, Jaimini and the subsequent great Acharyas, viz., Varahamihira, Satyacharya, Vararuchi, Devala, Yavanacharya, Vishnugupta and others have not given even one single illustrative horoscope to enumerate the theoretical principles of this highly Practical Science. If Astrology was something like, Philosophy, on the various religious systems dealing in Psychological and moral principles of an abstract nature, the omission of practical horoscopes, by those eminent authors would be justifiable. But like medicine and more than medicine Astrology is eminently a Practical Science. It is not a question where the planets are at any given time and their aspects and conjunctions, but what results would flow from such positions of planets in the natiivities of individuals. I cannot easily explain their silence on this important subject. It may be guessed that as they have given theoretical principles and were thoroughly convinced of the accuracy of such principles of the Astrological Sciences, they probably thought it quite unnecessary to give any practical horoscopes by way of illustrations. Vararuchi, Kalidasa and Varahamihira were great astronomers and astrologers in the Brilliant Court of Vikramaditya and it is surprising to note that not one of these great scholars has given even the horoscope of their illustrious Patron the great Vikramaditya. In Uttarakalamrita, by Kalidasa, the famous Poet dedicates his work to his generous Patron and his family Deity, Vikramarka and Mahakali respectively in Jyotirvidabharana, Kalidasa gives a detailed description of Vikramarka's Brilliant Court Pandits who lived, the extent of his army and his navy and some other details of that great monarch's rule. But even Kalidasa does not mention either the time of the birth of his great Patron or his horoscope. Chanikya or Vishnugupta, the author of profound astrological and venture to say that I have supplied a longfelt want. I now leave my readers to see the force of my remarks and to judge of this publication as of great utility for students and scholars engaged in the study and researches of astrology as a thoroughly practical science. The great Mayasura, father-in law of the dreaded Ten Headed Ravana, the Inventor of Maya or illusion and one of the greatest Scholars in Astrology, Astronomy and Physical Sciences and who obtained the gift of Suryasiddhanta from the glorious Sun himself in the shape of his son Chaya Purusha has not given a single practical horoscope. The Yavanas, who were great astrologers and astronomers have done nothing in this direction. Therefore the only possible explanation I can offer for this omission on the part of the greatest astrologers to give practical horoscopes, for illustrating the theoretical principles of astrology seems to be their complete conviction in the practical utility of their theoretical principles. They were able to come to this conclusion by their expanded mental vision called Divya Dristi by which they were enabled to frame theories, which would produce correct results and about such correctness, they entertained no doubts.

None of the horoscopes treated here is false and imaginary—they represent as correctly as possible the time of the birth of the person quoted here and the character sketches are real and what have been found within my knowledge. All reliance, therefore, can be placed upon the statements made here. The names are not mentioned and there are many reasons for this omission. Similarly situated planets affect persons born in different states of social life differently and this should never be forgotten. During the time of a good planet, the son of a king ascends to a throne, while a carpenter or a smith or a merchant or a lawyer would achieve brilliant success in his own line. To change the general condition and status of a person very strong planetary periods are needed, and all these are exhaustively treated in my works on Astrology to which the readers are respectfully directed for reference.

In course of time I intend publishing one hundred horoscopes to illustrate each of the twelve Bhavas and when carried out this book will contain 1,200 horoscopes and will be of immense help to the students engaged in the acquisition of knowledge by which they can easily confirm or contradict their practical lessons with those which they have learnt from theories. For royal horoscopes special combinations are given in Brihat Jataka and other authoritative books which must be carefully studied. On the whole the science is difficult and valuable and predictors will cut sorry figures if they do not study well digest the knowledge they have acquired and bring higher education and greater intelligence in solving the future mysteries of human existence for doing which astrology has been styled as the noblest achievement of human intellect.

No study in theory alone can give the student a proper mastery over any subject. Education has two important divisions, one the "Theory" and the other the "Practice". It is not easy to say which is more valuable of these two branches. But it is commonly stated that a handful of experience is worth ten cart loads of theorising. Practical training seems to be highly necessary for the conversion of all theoretical learning into usefulness for human existence. Practice has its own doubts and difficulties, which the theory cannot solve and the theory has its difficulties and doubts which the practice may not be able to comprehend. Education therefore will be complete only when the man is well trained in these two important divisions of knowledge. Where their cultivation is neglected, the capacity of that person to be useful in that science or branch of knowledge, will be far from the stage of perfection. It is highly essential, therefore to have a large number of real horoscopes living and dead for illustrative purposes and study them in the light thrown by the astrological principles inculcated in the books already published by me and by other eminent astrologers. Hasty inferences will always undermine the strength of conviction and should not be drawn by novices in the study of Astrology. Where the principles have no application in any given illustrative horoscope, the reader will do well to carefully consider the apparent contradictions, till he procures knowledge by which he can reconcile the two together, rather than rush into a tirade against the science of astrology or its numerous expounders. Knowledge is deep and will always yield fruit only to the reader, who commands great intelligence and vast patience. To the hasty student or the excited follower it will be found unwilling to lend him its valuable help and will even make confusion worse confounded. The horoscopes given here are all true and genuine, and the author is acquainted personally with the details of their lives. Therefore the student will have the best authority before him in the shape of genuine horoscopes, whose details are the results of planetary conjunctions and aspects. The principles enunciated in these works are incorporated from the best sources he was able to find in the standard works on this sublime science and the horoscopes discussed are those of persons who had the experience related in these pages. The student has always to divide his studies into three different Chapters in astrology. First he must take such horoscopes whose experiences (events) related here are clearly traceable by the planetary conjunctions on a superficial examination. Second he must study the principles of the science well and apply them deeply to such horoscopes which on a hasty study do not show agreement with the planetary positions in them but which on a careful examination reveal the truth of astrological formulas. Third he must try and grasp the most difficult principles of this science and see whether they have any application in the horoscopes, which on a cursory glance show results quite contrary to those which have been openly related in the astrological works. If after following these graduated methods he still finds doubts and difficulties, for which he can quote no satisfactory authorities from the standard astrological books, he must make up his mind to see personally the most famous men in the line, and get his difficulties solved by them. A short example will explain what is meant here. Tenth house indicates the means of livelihood in the horoscope of any man. If a student takes up a horoscope of a party, finds one or two exalted planets in the tenth he may at once say that the native (owner of the horoscope) will be in a good official or mercantile position according to the nature of the planet. This kind of illustration refers to Branch I of the above divisions. But if he takes a horoscope on hand, finds no planets in the tenth, but finds the man in a good position in life, he has then to consult the position of the lord of the tenth and the aspects, the tenth house has to have given him the position he possesses. But suppose he examines the horoscope, finds no planets in the tenth, no beneficial aspects or conjunction for its lord, or for itself, and still sees that the man is in a good position, then, he must examine the nature of the lord of the Navamsa occupied by the lord of the tenth from Lagna and from that begin to examine the position and occupation of the man. If this does not give him a sufficient clue, then he must see similarly from the Moon and the Sun. If after an examination of all these three, the student finds no satisfactory combination or aspect which justifies the position, the native commands then, he must refer to all the complicated conjunctions of planets given for Raj or Dhan Yogi and justifying his predictions in their light. Even after an examination of all these, he finds no astrological principles justifying the actual position of the native, then he must submit that horoscope to the examination of the best man in the field and take his instructions as regards the reading of those difficult horoscopes. In this way, great patience, intelligence, devotion and application must be brought to bear upon the calculations and predictions of horoscopes. Then only success can be secured. Knowledge is deeply imbedded in the technicalities of the sciences and if we want to possess it, we must dig deep, and get at it with patience and diligence. The horoscopes here are so arranged as to give the students great facilities to verify practically their theoretical principles of knowledge in astrology. A close study of these illustrative horoscopes with the astrological principles given in the books, will be found to be simply invaluable in strengthening their familiarity in the art of predicting the future events of human existence. The technical portion of a science is often the most unpalatable for beginners to master, but no satisfactory progress could ever be expected to be made in any science, without great intelligence, hard labour and close application. As the ladies and gentlemen concerned, have shown no inclination to see their names printed in connection with their horoscopes, illustrated here I have simply given them with the principle events of their lives.

The first edition of this book was exhausted long ago and the publication of the second edition had to be considerably delayed owing to pressing engagements. The horoscopes are selected from all grades of people after much scrutiny and much pain is taken to present the book to the public in an attractive style, not only in its get up but also in its value as a practical publication.

First I thought of giving 150 horoscopes, in the first edition of this book, I had given only 122 horoscopes. In this I have added 38 more and made the number 160. I feel sure that those who read it carefully will be immensely benefitted. It will be a source of pleasure to me to see and hear that my books on Astrology have really supplied a long felt desideratum. If circumstances prove favourable, I mean to bring out within a few months 600 horoscopes first and then 1200 afterwards. My readers will be glad to learn that this book is completed and published through God's mercy and grace in my 77th year.

No 92.—Sri Rama.

In the unfathomable depths of remote antiquity, Valmiki—the immortal poet of India—thus records the horoscope of Rama in his matchless Ramayana. In the XVIII Chapter of Balakanda, Maharishi Valmiki thus gives the combination of planets for Sri Rama's Birth—on the 9th lunar day of the Bright half of Chaitra, when Punarvasu ruled with Kataka as Lagna combined with Chandra and Guru, and five planets in deep exaltation, was born the lord of the world, and one who would be worshipped by all people. Here, as Guru is exalted in Kataka and Chandra is with him in Lagna, it must be the 4th padam or quarter of Punarvasu. Chaitra means Aries or Meshā and therefore the Sun must be in deep exaltation. When the Sun is in deep exaltation, Mercury must be near him and therefore he cannot be exalted. He is exalted in Kanya, and the month must be Bhadrapada or Ashvīya, 5 or 6 months later. The other planets in exaltation are Mars, Venus and Saturn. Out of the seven planets, Chandra is in his own house, and Budha is not in exaltation. The other five planets, viz., Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Venus and Saturn are in deep exaltation. The horoscope is thus formed

Mars
Rahu		Saturn

Born in Kataka with Moon and Jupiter (exalted) with four other planets in deep exaltation, produces a man in the noblest of human royal families

No. 93.—Harischandra.

The name of Harischandra is synonymous with Truth and uprightness. No Sovereign to day commands greater respect for speaking Truth, and suffering the most incredible troubles and miseries and loss of power for maintaining Truth as Sathya Harischandra does. He preceded Rama by many generations and governed Ayodhya with great credit and capacity. His horoscope, as can be made out by ancient works, is given here. In these extreme old cases we cannot offer many remarks.

	RASEE		Birth Guru
Kuja
		Sani

Excepting the position of the Moon who is placed in Mesha, the horoscope almost resembles that of Sri Rama, his illustrious successor on the throne of Ayodhya. The story of Vasista protecting him to speak Truth at any cost and Viswamitra tempting him to tell a lie under the greatest temptations is so well-known that it needs no repetition.

Protected by the moral power of the Venerable Vasista, Harischandra defied all the temptations and baits held out by the great Viswamitra, lost his kingdom, his wife, his health, and even his own son, and condescended to guard the burial ground as the meanest of servants. Such heroic examples of nobility and morality in the cause of Truth are not many even in the Puranas, and by his moral fortitude, he recovered all that he lost, stood victor in the contest, and was blessed by Vasista and admired by Viswamitra. The monarchs in the Solar line of Kings, have left, great names to posterity, and Harischandra is one of the greatest in that noble line of Sovereigns, terminating in the incarnation of Rama, and conquering the invincible Ravana, who powerful as he was, grew to be highly oppressive and intolerant of moral and religious progress and devotion.

No. 94 —Ravana.

Ravana, the dreaded ten headed Lord of Lanka, was a worthy foe of Rama, and the valour he displayed in all his endless wars, with the Sovereigns of the world, and even with the celestial potentates has been highly commanded by the military experts. His tyranny knew no bounds and his abduction of the fair Seetha, spouse of Rama, at last brought his destruction and that of all his relations and warriors. Indrajit his famous son, who had conquered Indra, the celestial Ruler, well nigh annihilated Rama's army of Vanaras and had almost killed Rama and his valiant brother Lakshmana. Ravana's brother Kumbhakarna, remarkable for his colossal size and ferocity, is a well known name. Ravana's horoscope runs thus —

In the annals of Valmiki's Ramayana even among those gigantic Rakshasas, Kumbhakarna's size was colossal, and looks incredible.

Moon represents mind and he is in conjunction with Saturn though in exaltation. Budha occupies the house of debilitation with Venus in exaltation. Hence he had any number of enemies and finally suffered crushing defeat so much so that he almost destroyed his race of Rakshasas, and pulled down the grand fabric of political power which he had so grandly raised by the strength of his arms, by the skill with which he wielded his power, by the able associates, which it was his fortune to secure, and lastly by the great Tapas or contemplation on God, from which he secured almost boundless advantages both in strength and also in the political sway and power. While truth stands on an adamantive basis, all founded Theories are dashed to pieces against the Rock of Truth.

Planets may have their own vagaries. There is no basis to suppose that they move uniformly for even one thousand years. The Sun's displacement from his original position of commencing the Solar year from Krithika to Aswini and Ayanamsas, varying from 17 to 23 degrees, maintained by different schools of astronomers, point out of facts, which may have been different from what they are now. See my English translation of Brihat Jataka under Nabhasayogas.

No. 96.—Adi Sankaracharya

This Great Advaita Preacher and Philosopher was born at Kalati in the present Travancore State about 7 miles from the Railway Station Angamali. A brief sketch of the positions of planets, is given in Sankaravijaya by the famous Madhavacharya or Sri Vidyaranya, the 11th Jagad Guru in the order of succession on the Pontifical Throne of Sringeri Mutt. Sankaracharya, was born in an auspicious Lagna, combined by an auspicious planet aspected by a benefic, when Guru was in a Kendra, and the three planets, Mars, Sun and Saturn were in exaltation. This is very meagre and much cannot be made out of this short stanza. But from the critical researches I have made about this great Acharya he was born on the 5th day of the Bright half of the Lunar month Vaisakha in the Cyclic year Eswara in Saka Vikrama 14. This corresponds to B. C. 44. He was ordained as a Sanyasi on the 3rd day of the Bright half of Lunar month Vaisakha in the Cyclic year Parthiva in Saka Vikrama, 22 B. C. 36; so he was only 2 days less than 8 years old when he received the Pontifical orders. Before him there was no Mutt and the one at Sringeri was founded by him in 32 B. C. Different Puranas give some altered times and some make him take his place at a later date. But when Nautical calculations give him 61 years 1 month and 18 days. He seems to have died on the 8th of May 632 A.D. The following is his horoscope.

Sun and Venus are in exaltation. Mercury though in debilitation is aspected by Jupiter and is in conjunction with exalted Venus. Mars occupies Aries with the Sun in exaltation. Moon is in the 4th quarter of Swati and therefore is in the Navamsa of Meena or Pisces. Lagna or Chandra falls in the Anthyā or last Navamsa. Meena indicates advanced yoga and final emancipation. The lord of the birth Saturn is in the 11th with Jupiter and the lord of the house occupied by the Moon, Venus is in the 6th house from him in exaltation causing Adhiyoga.

Mahomet's power of eloquence and fire are indicated by the two planets Guru and Śani in the second house from Chandra Lagna, and the lord of the second house from Lagna, Śani being combined with the greatest benefic Guru in the 11th house. From the position of the Moon it is clear that he was full and occupies the 10th house from Lagna. The position of Kethu in the 12th house, as in the horoscopes of Rama and Krishna, shows his advanced gnana or divine wisdom, and the final emancipation, he obtained by his great wisdom and internal development. The lord of Lagna, Śani aspects it and this caused a great political combination.

how to sign his name even, in the midst of his greatest power and pomp, and never cared to learn the alphabet of any language. This was his greatness or weakness throughout his long and conquering life

He was a man of wonderful civil and military genius and possessed a most extraordinary memory and capacity to read the character of men whom he had to employ in such countless numbers and in such a variety of civil and military functions. At the time of his death, Tipu was bequeathed a fortune of 80 crores in cash, many crores of rupees worth of jewellery and gems, about a million of well trained and well disciplined troops, distributed all over his extensive empire, about 300 strong forts garrisoned with troops and a country which stretched across the South Indian Peninsula from the Eastern to the Western oceans, and from the river Krishna to the confines of Rameswaram from North to South yielding about 30 crores of annual revenue

No. 99 — Tipu Sultan of Mysore.

He was born in 1752, in the Cyclic year Angirasa in the Bright half of the Lunar month Kartika in the constellation Bharani. His birth place is marked by a poor tablet in a small compound near the Railway Station at Devanahalli, 22 miles due north of Bangalore.

He ruled from 1782 to 1799 and died on the 4th May Amavasya of Chaitra in the Cyclic year Siddharta, in the sub period of Guru in the Major period of Guru. He was called Tiger of Mysore by the British and rushed to his death, against the deliberate

 BA, MRAS, FRHS,
Editor of the Astrological Magazine.

It is but right, that my history should find a place in my translations and books. I belong to the Mulakanadu sect of the Andhra Community of Brahmins, and have the Gotra of the Venerable Vasista, the revered family Guru of Sri Rama and the Solar line of monarchs. Vasista, Sakti, Parasara, Vyasa and Shuka are my first progenitors. My grandfather was a military officer under Hyder and Tippu and changed the career to civil in his later life. Venkataramanayya, my grandfather was born in 1747 and died in 1828. He lost his first wife Narasamma in his 59th year and married my grandmother Naranamma of Hegganahalli in his 60th year and got 7 children from her. Two daughters and five sons of whom my father Gopala Rao was the 3rd son. My father was born on Friday 17th July 1816, the 10th Lunar day of the Dark half of the month Ashadha in the Cyclic year Dhatu at 15 ghatis after Sunrise under the constellation Bharani with the period of Venus and he was only 12 years old when his father died. My father was of slender build, energetic, strong and extremely active in work, qualities which I have inherited to a large extent. My mother Rukminamma the daughter of Palamonda Subba Rao Pantulu, was an intelligent, handsome and quiet going lady, and died in her 39th year, when I was about 13 years old. My father could speak and read about ten languages, and filled various posts in the Ganjam District, Northern Circars, and finally became Manager or Dewan of Parlakimidi or Chinna-kimidi Zemindari as it is called now. He was an expert in Mantrasastras, and highly religious and obliging. He would never flinch from doing an obligation and brought me up with great love and care.

The following is his horoscope. His tapobala was so great that with a blade of grass he was able to stop about 1,000 cattle and about 30 or 35 cow-herds under the Maha Astra of Sanmohana. All the cattle and men lost their consciousness, and after an hour of trial they began to move as if nothing had happened, when my father threw away the blade of grass. Mark the positions of planets in all the Kendras. In addition to his onerous duties, he completed the gigantic task of finishing with his own hand, one crore and twenty five lacs of Sri Ramamasas, and concluded the religious rites, connected with them four months before his death. Guru in Lagna and Sukra and Ravi in the 10th made him a wonderful man in Mantrasastras and he used to perform miracles when he liked. He died in his 76th year on the morning of the 27th August 1891, and was therefore 75 years and 40 days old according to English calculations.

Sani			Kuja

My mother had some abortions and at the advice of a Sadhu in Chicacole, after the performance of severe remedies, she had four daughters and two sons, myself being the younger son. My elder brother Jagannatha Row entered the Mysore service and retired as an Amildar or Tahasildar and died in December 1915. I was born on Tuesday Rathasaptami in Maghaof, the Cyclic year Rakshasa, on 12th February 1856, at about 14 ghatis after Sunrise or midnoon at Chicacole in the Ganjam District and the following is my horoscope.

	Chandra Rahu	Lagna	Sani
Ravi Budha Guru	Rasi Diagram
Sukra		Kuja Kethu

After my birth my father wanted to give me the name of his father Venkataramanah, but it appears, on the fourth day I became seriously ill and in the night, God Surya or the Sun appeared to my father in a dream and ordered my father to name me as Suryanaraina, as I was born at mid-noon on the Ratha-saptami, a day held sacred to the Sun and the Moon, all over India. About 4 miles from Chica-cole there is a village called Arasavalli, where there is a complete Temple to the Sun God and which is considered a sacred shrine by the neighbouring people. My father most gladly accepted the altered name and to his surprise and that of my good mother, I was alright on the 5th day of my birth. My father was called Gopala Row. He completed 125 laes of Ramanamas with his own hand and died on Gokulastami held sacred to Sri Krishna, and my mother was called Rukmini, the name of the sacred wife of Krishna. At 12 o'clock in the noon the Sun is most powerful and the time goes under the special name of Abhijn Moohurta, and Abhijit Sarva Doshaghnam or that noon time which cuts and cures all evil influences. A notable incident occurred to me in my 5th year, which has influenced all my life to a considerable extent. My first Aksharabhyasa or beginning of education began in my 5th year at Parlakimidi, where my father was Dewan to the Raja.

On that memorable night, I slept with my father, and had a wonderful dream. I was taken to Suryaloka to the presence of the glorious Sun, and made to sit on his lap. His spouse Chayadevi gave me payasam (wheat preparation with milk and sugar) and some fruits and made me eat them. After showing great love and kindness Surya put his hands on my head, patted me on my back and pronounced the blessing, that I would live long, have many children, become a learned and great man, would write many books and become an author, events which have been most wonderfully verified. I am now in my 77th year, with a brain as clear and vigorous as it was when I was 30 or 35 years, and I have completed 67 books on various subjects, including my History of Vijayanagar, the Never-To-Be-Forgotten Empire. I awoke and related my dream to my father, who had already anticipated some idea of my future greatness. In my boyish days I was extremely intelligent, and possessed an admirable memory, coupled with a strong and piercing intellect. But as it often happens with intelligent boys, I was irregular in attendance at school, careless of my studies, fond of running, jumping and other athletic exercises, and was mischievous to a considerable extent. All the while I felt I would become a great man and a scholar, and even challenged my teachers with this idea when they found fault with my irregular attendance and want of attention to my lessons. While I was in the Senior B A class, in the Central College at Bangalore, Mr J Cook, M A, Principal, rebuked me for want of attention to studies and for not copying notes, which he gave us copiously. I was ready with my impertinent answer. I observed in a determined tone that copying notes forms the part of dull headed students, and superficial teachers and that bright students, like myself, need no such process. He remarked that he was a student and amanuensis of Dr Bain of Psychological fame and that I should obey him. I told him that I would become a greater man, than both of them, with the result that I was turned out of the class for a day. Mr Cook was a generous Scotch gentleman. He sent for me next day and questioned me whether my behaviour was right.

I replied that his treatment of students should be different as the intelligent and spirited could not bear calmly remarks which dull boys, consider as their inheritance. Both being frank the reconciliation was quick and smooth. When I met him 20 years after publishing some of my works, specially the History of Vijayanagar or the Never-To-Be-Forgotten Empire, he had the nobility to address me as a greater man than himself, while I modestly, acknowledged his valuable instructions as the basis for all my scholarship in English and Physical Sciences. I was intended to take up the legal line and finished my legal studies, and practised for about 9 years as a Lawyer in Bellary, I kept up a decent establishment, and my house was open to all classes of professional experts. The musicians, the veena-men, the learned she bore ten children, of whom five died and five are living. My father-in-law Palamonda Panchanatha Row was an Assistant Commissioner in the Mysore Service and earned a very good name as an officer. He died 21 years ago. After the death of my first wife in 1903, I married again Subbamma, daughter of Venkataramasastry. She bore 5 children, two of whom died soon after birth. I have now 2 daughters and one son by her. I have now 21 grandchildren and one great grandchild. I have built a spacious bungalow at the side of a village named Hunsamaranahalli on the Nandi High Road, 12 miles due north of Bangalore. It contains 3 acres of compound, planted with varieties of fruit and flower trees. I have kept up a decent establishment with ten servants, and am leading a quiet honorable and religious life. My birthdays are celebrated on a grand scale, and I am visited by all classes, creeds and nationalities of people from all parts of the world and my home is open to my friends and relations. My eldest son Nanjunda Row, helps me in my publication business. My second son B. Lakshminarayana Row, B.A., is a Graduate of Philosophy and Logic and is an Inspector of Schools in the Mysore Service. My third son Somasekhara Row, was adopted by my late brother. My 4th son Chandrasekhara Row, aged 13 years is studying here. Three daughters are married and happily settled in life. I have one little daughter aged 11, to marry yet. God has been graciously pleased to keep me above want and in comparatively good health for my advanced age.

Though my earnings have been great, my expenses have not been small. I possess generous instincts and always take delight in helping others when my aid is needed. I am an admirer of all talents in any form in any man and my company is always pleasant and instructive. I may be called a jolly hearted fellow, as I never take miseries in a miserable light. I possess fluent powers of speech and writing in almost equal degrees and this rare gift I attribute to the special grace of the Goddess of learning Saraswathi. I always pray to her devoutly and get my promptings through Her Divine Grace. My familiarity with Western and Eastern Sciences gives me great advantage to lead the people wherever I may be. I am a great lover of music and other fine arts, and my residence is generally kept in a fashionable manner. I have had audience with Viceroys, Governors and Maharajas, and all of them were pleased with my behaviour, spirit of independence and capicity in conversation and arguments. I have had suitable khillats and presents from many Maharajas and Aristocrats and the National and individual predictions I made about wars, famines, deaths of royal personages, plagues, epidemics and other phenomena, have been remarkably fulfilled and these facts are well-known to the public, who are in touch with my works. I predicted about the great Anglo-German War, and the nations who would be involved in its deadly folds, six months before the war in my March Magazine for 1914, and said, that the war would begin in August of that year. The Magazines are before the public, and they can judge of the truth of these statements. My lectures, conversations and works have been highly appreciated by the cultured public. I have been leading a religious life, in this age of false allurements, of false civilisation and of false professions and have felt strongly in my innermost heart that God protects all those, who entirely, sincerely and honestly place their faith and confidence in Him. My own independent life is a great illustration of that principle, which lays down complete devotion to God and honest and sincere life under His gracious and omnipotent guidance should be the highest ideal for human efforts. May He shower His choice Blessings on all and make the world happy, cheerful and peaceful, have been my earnest daily prayers to the Almighty. The aphorism, so beautifully and aptly ordained on every holy Brahmin after his Pujas are over, deserves to be reproduced here for the benefit of my readers.

*"Swasti Pratyabhyaṣa Paripalayanantam Nyayana Margayana Mahimā Mahasāha Gobrahmanaybhyaassu-
bha Mastu Netyam, lokassamastatsukhino Bhavantu Kalay Varshatī Parjanyāha Prityassasyasalinī, Dessoyam Kshobhbarahrito Brahmanas santu Nirbhayāha Aptura Putrinassanta, Putrinassakatu Poutrinaha.
Adhanahissadhanussantu jeevanti saradam satam."*

Liberally translated the verse means—let all the people live in happiness, let the rulers be just and sympathetic in their rule, let the milky cows and Brahmins be blessed everyday, let all the worlds enjoy perfect happiness, let seasonal rains enrich the lands, let the earth be productive, let the countries enjoy freedom from epidemics, let Brahmins attend to their prayers, without any fear from evil minded people, let those who have no children beget children, let those who have no grandchildren be blessed with grandchildren, let those who have no money, get money and let all people live till they are one hundred years old. This is a prayer, as tolerant, as honest, as broad minded and as sympathetic as possible and when really good men send these prayers constantly to God with faith and devotion they will never go in vain. I shall give you here a short sketch of my ancestors and pedigree

I am a direct descendant of the great Maharishis Vasista, Parasara and Vedavyasa. The Pedigree of Vedavyasa is thus given in our daily prayers.

- 1 Vasista-Brahma Manasaputra or one evolved out of the great mental power or energy of Brahma
- 2 Sakti son of Vasista and Arundhati.
- 3 Parasara son of Sakti
4. Vedavyasa, Badarayana or Krishna Dwaipayana son of Parasara
5. Shuka son of Vyasa
